"Poor Carlotta."

"Poor Carlotta!" Maximilian was shot faced to the front. His last words were "Poor Carlotta!" How tender and touching is the convincing illustration of the manly and generous nature of the fallen Emperor! Abandoned by France, betrayed by a Mexican follower, tried by a military tribunal of his implacable enemies, condemned to death, and brought out for execution, all interposition in his behalf from the representatives of foreign Powers having failed, this distinguished victim of Napoleon's "grand idea" would have been justified had he devoted his last moments in denouncing the contrivers of his destruction and the barbarians thirsting for blood, and in deploring his untimely fall, in the strength of his manhood and hopes. But Maximilian was a man of larger breadth of mind and heroism than this. He had deliberately cast his life into the scales in defence of his empire, he had pledged his sword in the name of his imperial house of Hapsburg to fight it out with his enemies, and, like a true soldier, he was prepared for this last disaster. He recognized his fate as resulting from the fortunes of war, and had neither denunciations nor regrets on his account to make. Like the dying Gladiator at Rome :-

He recked not of his life, nor of the prize, His heart was home, and that was far away. Face to face with his remorseless executioners, awaiting but the word to "fire!" all thoughts of his lost empire and his low the price of that article. estate gave away to those endearing memories and sweet affections which had linked his life, his happiness, his fate and his ambition with "poor Carlotta!" As to a drowning man events of his past life running through many years of time are vividly reproduced in few fleeting seconds, so to this victim of Mexican vengeance were, no doubt, recalled in the last moments of his earthly existence those charming recollections of his young, beautiful, gifted, accomplished and devoted wife, whereby he had become so fascinated with his Mexican empire and his hopes of the Mexican people, that he could only relinquish them with his life.—
"Poor Carlotta!" Her triumphal journeys, her floral receptions, her welcome charities, her gracious ways, her catholic piety and her resistless, womanly gentleness among the susceptible Mexicans, were all so faithfully devoted to his cause as to develop in him the heroism of the feudal ages. He was her gallant knight, equipped by her own fair hands for a glorious crusade; she was his queen of love and beauty, to whom his word as a soldier and his faith as a devotee were pledged. All these thoughts in the presence of the grave, doubtless, recurred to him as the memories of a golden dream, and from these and that other thought, that she hopefully braved the dangers of the seas, and the doubtful generosity of France in his behalf, only to be repelled in

Nor is there in the records of history, as the last words of a dying saint or hero, anything given which appeals so tenderly to our better nature, to all that beautifies and softens the human character, as these dying words of Maximilian-"Poor Carlotta!" They will crown in history this fallen man. However misguided he was in his ambition or in his acts as a ruler, those two words, with all their impressive and redeeming associations, will crown him with the flowers of affection and the laurels of the hero. Had he recited and cloquently vindicated every step and every act in his imperial career he would have failed to reach the eloquent defence embodied in his dying exclama-tion of "Poor Carlotta!" To her they will be the words of restoration or dissolution; for him they are the wreath of immortality. - "Poor Carlotta!"—New York Herald.

POLITICAL PRAYERS.—The inaugural prayer of Chaplain Boynton, the other day, in Congress, was a palpable improvement over the political praying of the last Congressional session, but contained a dexterous review of the sitaution after all. "He blessed God that when any sudden danger threatens the land, just as suddenly the great constitutional shield could be interposed." That is to say, when the President gives such and such directions to his subordinates in the South, Congress, the "great constitutional shield," can be convoked and interposed. We sometimes, hear of "bread and butter" men; it seems to us that this is bread and butter with a vengeance, and butter laid on with a trowel. "He prayed God to induce the President so to use his great power that the peace of the country might be pro-moted thereby." Congress, on the other hand, seems to have needed no divine help, as none, according to the report, was invoked for its guidance. He prayed that "all who advise the President," i. e. Mr. Stanbery particularly, "may help to influence him so that, co-operating with the Legislative branch of the Government, all may at last see eye to eye"-whatever that sort of vision may mean, as transferred from religion to politics. We do not believe in political praying, and not much in political preaching, because it is ex parte, and gives no chance for opponents to get up and make a prayer or a sermon in reply.-New York Times.

PARIS has gone mad on the subject of lownecked dresses. They are getting more and more decollete, and the leaders of ton are appearing without any bodice at all, merely using a band like that worn by infants, which has the advantage of covering up nothing in front, and being utterly regardless of everything bebind. It requires tact, however, to keep it ou. One lady, with no sleeves, at a ball in Paris, and only a narrow gold cord, in the excitement of the dance broke the cord, and everything came down by the run.

A letter from New Orleans says: "On Mardi Gras one of the masqueraders wore a military dress, the epaulettes of which were made of 'spoons.' As he passed, the people seeing the spoons—even the negroes—shouted 'Butler, Butler !' "

A few ignorant practitioners have asserted that there is nothing that will force or hasten the growth of the hair or beard. Their assertions are false, as thousands of living witnesses (from their own experience) can bear witness. But many will say, how are we to distinguish the genuine from the spurious? It certa nly is difficult, as nine-tenths of the different preparations advertised for the hair and beard are entirely worthless, and you may have already thrown away large amounts in their purchase. To su h we would say, try the Reparator Capilli; it will cost you nothing unless it fully comes up to our representations.
